HEI-SAMI

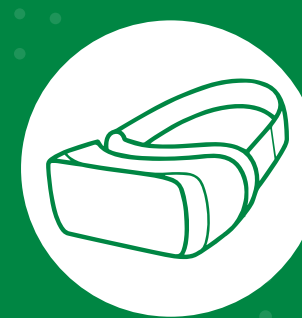

Sami Language in Higher Education in Suburban Areas

Lene Antonsen (UiT-Arctic University of Norway), Berit Merete Nystad Eskonsipo (UiT-Arctic University of Norway), Pigga Keskitalo (University of Lapland), Krister Stoor (Umeå University), Inker-Anni Linkola-Aikio (University of Lapland), Christina Storm Mienna (Umeå University), Maiju Saijets (University of Lapland) & Ilona Kivinen (University of Helsinki)

HEI-SAMI GOALS

- Our project's primary objective is to establish a robust network and facilitate collaboration among institutions dedicated to teaching the endangered North Sámi language in suburban settings.
- Through institutional visits, workshops, and practical collaboration, we aim to identify and address key challenges in Sámi language education, ultimately leading to sustainable partnerships.
- Furthermore, our goal extends to developing innovative, joint learning materials and methods for both educators and students, thereby creating a space to utilize scarce resources effectively.
- Exchange of experiences.

- Sami language and literature programs at mother tongue level, also as a part of teacher education: Year unit and BA: 8–10 students every second year. MA: appr. 2 students finish every year.
- Sami with didactics as a subject in teacher education, for students with prior knowledge of Saami: 30 or 60 ECS. 2–4 new students every year.
- From beginner level: year unit 60 ECS + possible extension 30 ECS. Appr. 40 students every second year.
- Collaboration: Sami language centers' students can complete 10–20 ECS per semester. 2024: altogether 990 ECS.

■ University of Helsinki: Sami studies

- Sami research studies includes basic studies and a Bachelor's program (120 ECTS)
 - approximately one student enrolls per year
- Minor studies open to all students (60 ECTS) (few students participate per year).
- Studies are popular; around 30 students typically participate in the basic studies. The program collaborates with Finno-Ugric Language Studies and Indigenous Research, with a strong focus on language history.

■ University of Lapland: Sami language studies

- North Sami minor studies 25 ECTS.
- Open for anyone with competency in the Sami language.
- Based on the demands of working life and the primary goal is to develop Sami speaking professionals.
- The studies are delivered through distance education.
- The number of students approximately 8 per year.

■ Umeå University

- Umeå University offers studies in North, Lule, and South Sámi, focusing on strong oral and written skills and deep language structure understanding.
- Sámi language programs are available at Year Unit, BA, MA, and Ph.D. levels, with 5–10 students enrolling annually.
- Sámi cultural studies are offered at the BA, MA, and Ph.D. levels.
- Várdduo – Centre for Sámi Research conducts and collaborates on Sámi and Indigenous research, including projects related to Sámi languages.
